"Our cognitive processes take the lead from, and are guided by our emotions [...] In clinical practice, this means that we should take very seriously indeed our patients’ emotional states, how they are feeling, and hence what they may desire from the consultation."