

CONCLUDING REMARKS

Professor Duncan: I would like to thank the speakers for their helpful, instructive and beautifully presented papers. I should also like to congratulate them for the way in which they have coped with the questions. I made a note when Dr Clarke was speaking this morning that the way to get out of any difficulty was to invoke mosaicism, and I am interested to note that in all the questions this afternoon, no one invoked mosaicism at all! I think this is a tribute to the way in which they have dealt with the very stimulating questions put forward. I would like to thank you all for attending and I would like on your behalf to thank very cordially the speakers who have put in so much time, both in advance and today, in speaking to us. Thank you very much indeed.

Dr W. Howells (Chairman, Welsh Faculty Board, Swansea). We are very pleased at the success of this symposium, the first we have held of this kind. The success has been largely due to two excellent chairmen. We are very indebted to the authorities of the University College of Swansea for this delightful room, particularly to Mr Bodycombe, who came with the symposium committee and made the arrangements possible. The Symposium Committee have worked very hard, and we are grateful to Dr Kerr, the secretary, and Dr Gilbert Clarke in particular for making the arrangements for the speakers. Finally the Welsh Faculty of the College of General Practitioners gratefully acknowledge the support given to the symposium by the Geigy Pharmaceutical Company Limited and their assistance with its organization.
